During past months the Governments of the United States and of Japan, through the secretary of state and the Japanese Ambassador in Washington, have engaged in protracted conversations directed toward exploring the possibility of reaching a sound basis for negotiations between the two countries relative to the maintenance of peace with order and justice in the Pacific. The principle and policies which were under discussion these conversations precluded pursuit by either Government of objective of resolution by force or by threat of force.

On July 26 last the President of the United States informed the Japanese Government through the Japanese Ambassador in Washington that he was willing to suggest to the Government of Great Britain, of the Netherlands and of China that they make binding and solemn declaration that they had no aggressive intentions with regard to Indo-China and that they would agree that the interests and new interests of Indo-China should be applicable to all powers on equal terms. The president stated further that he would be willing to suggest to the powers mentioned that they undertake the declaraslow, in which the United States would be willing to join, upon the understanding that the Government of Japan would be disposed to make a similar declaration and would be further disposed to withdraw its military and naval forces from Indo-China.

Notwithstanding these efforts, the Government of Japan has continued its military activities and its disposals of armed forces at various points in the Far East and has occupied Indo-China with its military, air and naval forces.

The Government of the United States is in full sympathy with the desire expressed by the Japanese Government that the Anglo-Japanese Alliance be provided a fresh basis for national and mutually profitable relations known over the countries.

This Government's patience seeking an acceptable basis for such an understanding has been demonstrated these and again during recent years and especially during recent months. This Government feels at the present stage that nothing short of the total complete (total) can do (and) its part. In the light of evidence and indications which come to it from many quarters, will at this moment tend to further the objectives sought.

Such being the case, this Government now finds it necessary to say to the Government of Japan that if the Japanese Government takes any further steps in pursuance of a policy or program of
